I. Purpose and topics of the conference

Sustainability efforts have already become part of our everyday life. During food production, in commercial and industrial processes, and even in our finances, sustainability has become a buzzword. We strive for sustainability in everything. In order to help achieve the goals, the EU has defined new guidelines, the compliance of which poses a serious challenge to political and economic leaders.

The field of social sciences is affected from countless directions by sustainability regulations and the changes and new solutions initiated by them. At the same time, new ideas and solution proposals are born in this area as well, which can become usable for other industries as well.

Continuing the endeavor started in 2020 by the Institute of Social Sciences of the University of Dunaújváros, we are waiting for the application of researchers to the conference who offer the results of their own scientific field to the service of the process of sustainability and economics.

Topics of the conference:

- The sustainability turn
- New resources for economics, and the revolution of knowledge in economics
- Economic aspects of talent and creativity
- Renewable economics and environmental sustainability
- Megacities and the Smart City
- Data and information: the new raw material

The conference is sponsored by Hungarian National Bank.

- A further technological revolution: the vision of human resource management
- Platform economy
- Monetary digitalisation
- Training, sustainability, interdisciplinarity
- Communication and digitization.
